Picked Up Here and There.

Ushers acting as escorts for the mothers of the bride and bridegroom, as well as for the bride, at the marriage last week of Miss Helen Irving Phillips, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Wendell C. Phillips of New York, and Mr. Monroe Van Wart De Mott, struck a new note in wedding customs, says the New York Herald.

In the past they have been called upon to act as honorary escort to the bride, one of the number being delegated to take the mothers of the bride and bridegroom to their places. But last Saturday, November 4, afternoon, in the chapel of St. Bartholomew's Church, all ushers—Messrs. George B. Gibbons, N. Davenport Lawton, Jr., Hamilton Campbell, Ralph Runyon and John Waterhouse—conducted the Phillips, mother of the bride, and Mrs. Clifford De Mott, mother of the bridegroom, to their places at right and left of the altar with all the formality which they later accorded the bride in the wedding procession.

Word has been received by the San Francisco friends of Miss Esther Cleveland, land, says the Chronicle of that city, that she is very much interested in her philanthropic work among the French soldiers. Miss Cleveland recently completed a course in the Braille system at the Pennsylvania Institute for the Blind, and has gone abroad to teach blind soldiers. She is established at an American institution, the Phare de France, under the direction of Miss Winifred Holt, in the Rue Daru, Paris. Miss Bernhardt Grant, granddaughter of President Grant, is also doing some work at the same institution. Miss Cleveland is a quiet, studious girl, who, after a brilliant debut in Washington, D. C., gave up her social life for more serious pursuits.

With a group of women of society incorporating a shop, which promises to become a necessity in the 9th avenue retail district, to aid home and foreign charities, with others taking up the study of parliamentary law to fit themselves more ably to face and discuss the problems of the day, and with a man of their acquaintance giving his enlarged art collection for a lengthy public exhibition also to broaden the charitable scope, there is much more of seriousness than frivolity on the present horizon of society, says the New York Herald.

Mrs. Benjamin S. Guinness, Mrs. Harry H. Duryea, Mrs. Charles E. Greenough and Lady Colebrooke are four of a group of women who have joined the active 9th avenue saleswomen on every business day at Zahra's, Inc., at No. 1 East 9th street, where they are their own designers. They have their exclusive brand of cigarettes, and for men they offer humorous novelties, from luxurious dressing gowns to an original after-shaving lotion of a lemon verbena fragrance.

"We are here to stay," said Mrs. Guinness, at the opening on Thursday of the Free Hospital for Children and the Virginia day nursery, in this city, and the Millicent Sutherland ambulance and the three arts women's employment fund of London, successful war relief projects, will have a steady income to count upon.

Miss Anne T. Morgan, Mrs. Francis McNeill Bacon, Jr., Miss Maude K. Wetmore, Mrs. John Hay Hammond, Mrs. Willard D. Straight, Mrs. James A. Burden, Mrs. Clarence C. Huel, Mrs. C. Ledyard Blair, Mrs. George D. Pratt, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mrs. William Alexander, Mrs. Edward R. Stetson and Mrs. Samuel Eliot are some of the women who purpose to perfect themselves in parliamentary law. They started on last Friday, and will give weekly classes at the Cotter Club through the winter. Some of them, being women of affairs, already are well versed in real estate and civil law.

The marriage of Miss Marie Celeste Stauffer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Stauffer of 1506 Jackson avenue, New Orleans, La.,

Now in Vogue. Mr. Harry Burnett, 2d, son of Mr. Robert M. Burnett of Southboro, Mass., will be solemnized on November 18 at 5 o'clock at the residence of the bride-elect in New Orleans, says a writer in the Boston Globe. Miss Stauffer will have for her bridesmaids Miss Louise Stauffer, Miss Marie Elise Whitney and Miss Leola Stanton, all of New Orleans, and Miss Elaine Denegre, also of New Orleans and Manchester, Mass. The matrons of honor will be Mrs. Donald Maginnis, Mrs. Louis Haigie and Mrs. Albert

Schwartz of New Orleans. Mr. Burnett will have for his best man his brother, Mr. George Hall Burnett of Southboro. The ushers are honorary, for it is not expected that they will be present at the marriage on account of the distance from New Orleans of their places of residence. Mr. Burnett has extended invitations, however, to the following to assist in this capacity at the wedding: Mr. Jennings F. Sutor of Portland, Ore.; Mr. Grison of Lockney, Tex.; Mr. Addison L. Bliss of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mr. William Platt Pepper, Jr., of Philadelphia, Mr. Donald Clark Cottrell of Westbury, N. Y.; Mr. Frederick S. Bradlee of Boston; Mr. A. D. Sullivan of New York and Mr. Walter Stauffer of New Orleans. Mr. Burnett and his bride will reside at Deerfoot Farm, Southboro, where they will be "at home" after January 1. The engagement of Miss Stauffer and Mr. Burnett was announced last January.

I went down to Aldershot to see a hospital that had been opened recently, and on my return journey in a motor passed through the charming town of Farnborough. It is celebrated, writes a London correspondent in the Pittsburgh Gazette, as the place in which the ex-Empress Eugenie built the Benedictine monastery and the Abbey of St. Michael, in which repose the mortal remains of her son, the Prince Imperial, who was killed when fighting for the British in the Zulu war, and also the tomb raised to the memory of Napoleon III. Also at Farnborough there used to be a beautiful school for girls called Hillside convent, which the aged empress of the French had been instrumental in founding. The history of Hillside convent dates from the time of Eugenie's first flight to England, during the revolution. With her in that sad pilgrimage came several French nuns of the Order of the Sacred Heart. As these ladies are often trained as teachers, the empress started them with classes close to her own English home at Chislehurst, near Farnborough.

As I passed by the big red brick building, with its private chapel attached, and the beautiful grounds, fringed by a pine forest, it was curious to notice out of the windows that formerly framed kind heads and the formal outline of the sisters' black veils and snow-white caps, there were gray shirts and men's boots and various articles of military equipment, that showed that this building also had passed over to war uses. As in the days when Hillside convent was full of wholesome, hearty girls, the wonderful old empress, who has passed her ninety-first year, makes regular visits to the building, and always is bringing flowers and comfort of various kinds to cheer them. I caught a glimpse of her in the grounds as we passed one of the gates. She was seated in the autumn sunshine beside a soldier stretched in an invalid chair. The old lady was leaning forward, talking animatedly. She had a close of beautiful babies around her shoulders, and her bonnet of quaint, yet not inelegant, style had a long black veil falling from it over her ivory-white face, from which the silver hair was brushed in severe fashion. A fame that is all its own will distinguish the 1917 Sewing Circle from those of past years, for never in the history of Boston debutantes have so many of its members followed serious pursuits as during the present season. In addition to the list of eight or nine members, according to the Boston Globe, who are attending college, others are pursuing the study of art and devoting the greater part of their time to this interesting diversion rather than to the teas and dances that are so completely absorbing the greater portion of the younger set. One of the most interesting of the group of Sewing Circle girls engaged in the pursuit of art is Miss Jeannette Kilham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Kilham of Brookline. Miss Kilham inherits her love of art both from her mother and father, for Mrs. Kilham is a portrait and landscape painter of unusual merit, and Mr. Kilham is a well known architect. Her sister, Miss Theresa Kilham, who also belongs to the Sewing Circle, is at Vassar College.

Bond street dealers in antique and "sham antique" furniture declare that the war has been more than offset by American buying. These Americans do not seem perturbed by the high ocean rates. They are, however, driving better bargains than in the old days. It is no longer the custom to palm off sham antiques for real. It is said that people of moderate means are perfectly content to have things that look like the more valuable article at a correspondingly cheap figure.

"We are getting Americans now," one dealer is quoted as saying, "but there is not so much to be made out of them. They know what they want, and, what is more, they know the price they want to pay."
